“In the Eyes of Justice” by The Honorable Cruz Reynoso, former California Supreme Court Justice

The 2008 Latino Caucus Speaker Series continued today with the Honorable Cruz Reynoso addressing the Caucus and members of the community. Reynoso, the first Latino California Supreme Court Justice, is recognized for his leadership in civil rights, immigration and refugee policy, government reform, the administration of justice, legal services for the indigent and education. His remarks, “In the Eyes of Justice” provided insights to his judicial experience and current events impacting Latinos in California.

Reynoso grew up in a family of eleven children in Orange County. As a youth, he picked fruit and attended segregated schools with other Latinos. At 14, he petitioned Washington, D.C., to get mail service for his La Habra community. The son of Mexican farm workers, he ignored friends who warned he would never be admitted to college and went on to earn an undergraduate degree from Pomona College and a law degree from the University of California, Berkeley.

The Speakers Series is a collaboration between the Latino Caucus and Comcast Northern California. Each event is rebroadcast on Comcast on Demand and available for free to Comcast subscribers as part of an initiative to provide relevant public policy to members of the Latino community.
